

February 27, 1987

306th ECHOES
2041 Hillsdale
Kalamazoo, Michigan 49007

Gentlemen:

In one of your earlier issues of the Echo, I read of a controversy as to where the "Rose of York" was christened. The enclosed photos may be of some help. In any case, they are yours to put in the archives of the 306th.

The photos were taken at Thurliegh. I can't remember the date but I was in the audience. In Photo #2, you can see the champagne on the ground after the christening. Photo #1 shows the then King, Queen, Princess and Gen. Doolittle, and the lead crew.

As to the lead crew, four (4) of them were members of my original crew (Pilot Lt. Roberts who was shot down on his third mission.)

Reading from left to right #3 is Lt. Pleasant, Navigator; #4 Lt. Northway Bombardier; #6 Sgt. Ashwood, radio operator; and #9 Sgt. Curley Landrum, Ball turret.

I thoroughly enjoy the Echo, and plan to be at the next reunion. Please keep up the good work.

Sincerely,

Richard W. Russell
Gunner
Lt. Roberts crew
367th Sqd.
306th Bomb Group

Enclosures

February 27, 1987

308th Bomb Group
3041 Hillside
Kalamazoo, Michigan 49007

Gentlemen:

In one of your earlier issues of the Edge, I read of a controversy as to where the "Rose of York" was christened. The enclosed photos may be of some help. In any case, they are yours to put in the archives of the 308th.

The photos were taken at Thurling. I can't remember the date but I was in the audience. In photo #2, you can see the champagne on the ground after the christening. Photo #1 shows the then King, Queen, Princess and Gen. Doolittle, and the lead crew.

As to the lead crew, four (4) of them were members of my original crew (Pilot Lt. Roberts who was shot down on his third mission).

Reading from left to right #3 is Lt. Pleasant, Navigator; #4 Lt. Northway Bombardier; #5 Sgt. Ashwood, radio operator; and #6 Sgt. Curley Landing, Ball turret.

I thoroughly enjoy the Edge, and plan to be at the next reunion. Please keep up the good work.

Sincerely,

Richard W. Russell
Gunner
Lt. Roberts crew
308th Sgd.
308th Bomb Group

Enclosures