SUGGESTION BOX:

Suggestion: "Why is money automatically deducted from an EI for laundry and dry cleaning when he doesn't use the service? That is unjustly. Perhaps it would be acceptable if the returned laundry and dry cleaning was half decent. But countless times there are always some items missing, or others substituted therefore. As for the dry cleaning, it's rare to see an EI's trousers with more than two creases in the same pant leg. Majority of EI would gladly fork over the necessary amount if the quality of the service was improved. Otherwise, answer: "It must be remembered that the laundry and dry cleaning of this country have been hard hit by the war, hence today their services are far below peacetime standards. A recent survey of the station shows better than the of the enlisted personnel using this service every week and that less than five percent of the bundles going to the laundry had missing items upon return. In each instance losses have been made up with similar items of government issue. As a result of this suggestion, effective 1 Jun/45, charge of 25¢ per week will be made only for laundry bundles actually sent in.

Attention is invited to Cir 4, Hq, U.K. Base, dated 19 Feb, 1945, which requires laundry and dry cleaning service for enlisted men to be handled through the quartermaster."
