SUGGESTION BOX:

Suggestion: "Now that the European war is over, we are glad to have played our part in defeating the major Axis. The 306th Group has an interesting part in it. But we are all wondering amidst our celebration, how many 306th men paid for the victory in their lives? Other pertinent questions are puzzling most of us. How many tons of bombs did we drop? How many planes lost? Number wounded, number killed--operational and non-operational. How many medals did we hand out? In other words each and every man would appreciate a history of this Group. This could be prepared by the PRO office who handles such information. I'm sure this would be a genuine souvenir and especially the old men would like to remember their old outfit. Come on let's give with a HISTORY OF THE 50TH BOMB GROUP. Tah!

Answer:

Your suggestion is a good one and has been adopted. Effective immediately, copies may be had for the asking at Group Intelligence Office in headquarters. Unfortunately, the facts and figures as to lives and planes lost, etc. are still under security restriction.
