ARMY REGULATIONS
No. 615-30

WAR DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, February 12, 1942.

ENLISTED MEN
ARMY SERIAL NUMBERS

Jurisdiction-----	Paragraph 1
Allotment-----	2
Assignment-----	3
Serial numbers for various components-----	4
Use-----	5

1. Jurisdiction.—Corps area commanders are charged with all matters pertaining to the assignment of Army serial numbers to all enlisted men within their respective areas, including exempted stations and commands, and oversea base commands which submit strength reports to the corps area. Blocks of serial numbers will be furnished for assignment to other enlisted personnel upon application to The Adjutant General by the commanding generals of expeditionary or other forces not included above.

2. Allotment.—Blocks of Army serial numbers have been allotted by The Adjutant General to the several corps area commanders, and will, by them, be reallocated as may be necessary to commanding and other proper officers for assignment to individuals. An accurate account of numbers allotted by corps area, expeditionary, or other force commanders and assigned by recruiting and other officers will be kept by those officers.

v. Cir. #128
4-30-42

3. Assignment.—a. General.—In order to facilitate identification, an Army serial number will be assigned by the enlisting or other proper officer to each enlisted man who has not previously been assigned a number, except men enlisting in the Enlisted Reserve Corps who have had no prior service. See paragraph 4d.

b. Number not to be changed or reassigned.—The Army serial number originally properly assigned to an enlisted man will not under any circumstances be assigned to another enlisted man. It will continue to be his number throughout his service in the Army, and will never be changed unless the enlisted man has subsequent service as a member of the National Guard inducted into Federal service, or as a trainee inducted under the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, in which case the serial numbers will be assigned as indicated in paragraph 4b and c.

c. Reassignment of numbers.—The Army serial number, if any, formerly borne by an enlisted man will be reassigned to him unless the current service is with federalized National Guard or as a Selective Service trainee, when the provisions of paragraph 4b and c will apply.

4. Serial numbers for various components.—In assigning an Army serial number to an enlisted man or inducted man the following will apply:

a. Regular Army.—Enlisted men to whom an Army serial number has never been assigned:

d. Enlisted Reserve Corps.—Upon call to active duty, Army serial numbers will be assigned to members of the Enlisted Reserve Corps to whom numbers have not already been assigned, and will be taken from the blocks allotted for use of the Regular Army, i. e., 11,000,000, etc., depending upon the corps area.

e. Regular Army Reserve.—In order to facilitate identification, the applicant's former Regular Army serial number followed by the letters "RA R" will be reassigned by the enlisting or other proper officer to each man enlisted or reenlisted in the Regular Army Reserve.

f. Consecutive numbers.—Consecutive numbers will not be assigned to men of the same surname. Canceled numbers will not be held available for reassignment.

5. Use.—a. The Army serial number assigned to an enlisted man is part of his official designation and, except as indicated in b below, will ordinarily appear in every military record in which his name appears, including every letter, telegram, order, report, pay roll, etc., at least once, preferably where the name first occurs.

b. On morning reports and duty rosters, Army serial numbers are not required unless there are in the company or detachment two or more men with the same surname and initials.

c. When the Army serial number is used it will ordinarily follow immediately the name of the enlisted man, and will precede the statement, if any, of his grade, organization, and arm or service.

d. Special care must be taken that the correct Army serial number is used for the reason that certain records are filed and certain accounts are paid by the Army serial number and not by name.

Information Sheet on US Army Serial Numbers

In February 1918, the Army adopted and allotted the serial number system, and on 16 March 1918, names and serial numbers were ordered to be stamped on the aluminum identification tags of all enlisted men, while the tags of the officers would continue to be stamped with the name, rank, regiment, corps, or department of the wearer.

During World War I, 5,996,630 serial numbers were allotted for assignment to all enlisted men. The numbers were first reported on February 1918 rolls. The series was discontinued 28 February 1919. Recruiting was resumed on 1 March 1919, and Army serial numbers for the post World War Regular Army from that date to 30 June 1940, when World War II simmered in Europe, went from Nos. 6,000,000 to 7,070,199.

In February 1921, serial numbers were prescribed for commissioned officers. In War Department Circular 138, 26 May 1921, paragraph 14, notice was given that soon numbers would be assigned to warrant officers, Army field clerks, and field clerks of the Quartermaster Corps. More important, permanent serial numbers were to be assigned to all commissioned personnel, including Army nurses. In July 1921, the letter "O" was added as a prefix for officer serial numbers and General John J. Pershing was assigned number O-1.

Army Regulations 615-30, 19 July 1921, announced the system of numbering serial numbers for men. This regulation was not revised until 12 February 1942, confirming a block system for enlisted men which had apparently been in use for some time. The system enabled one who knew it to tell from a serial number the component and corps area (later service command and army area), from which a man had entered the Federal service, whether he had enlisted or had been drafted through Selective Service, and whether he had been a National Guardsman in his home state. (Not until 1947 were serial numbers assigned to National Guardsmen regardless of their duty status in federal or state service).

In World War II, 7 December 1941--2 September 1945, serial numbers fell into two broad categories: simple seven or eight digit numbers (in a few cases fewer digits), for male enlisted personnel, and prefixed serial numbers for other personnel: "O" for male commissioned officers, "W" for male warrant officers, "T" for flight officers of the Army Air Force, "L" for commissioned officers of the Women's Army Corps, "V" for WAC warrant officer, "A" for WAC enlisted women, "R" for hospital dietitians, and "M" for physical therapy aids. These symbol prefixes could be said to summarize the broadened scope of Army military personnel by the end of World War II.

Serial numbers underwent one further development in World War II. The careless loss or intentional destruction of dentures was an annoying problem from the start of the war and various steps had been taken to solve it. Then in May 1944, a directive stated that all dentures would carry the names and serial numbers of their owners. The result was help in the return of lost appliances and the identification of the patient in case of accident.

The 1949 edition of AR 615-30, 2 September 1940, subject "Enlisted Personnel: Service Numbers," showed that the term "Serial Number" had been changed now to "Service Number."

The block of service numbers of five digits or less set aside in 1921 to identify Regular Army officers was used up in 1964. The No. 0-99,000 was assigned to 1st Lieutenant Eric E. Smart of the Corps of Engineers. Six-digit numbers preceded by the letter "O" were being used to identify officers of the Army National Guard, Army Reserve, and the Army of the United States. It was not feasible to start from 0-1 again, since holders of the low service numbers were still living. Brigadier General John L. Hines, USA (Ret), for instance, held No. 0-23 and was still living at 94, to hold the number until death in his 100th year. The Veterans Administration was using the service numbers of deceased officers to assist in managing the benefits for their survivors. Therefore, the decision was to create the new prefix "CF" and continue the numerical sequence. Thus Signal Corps Captain William E. Smart, who followed Lieutenant Smart on the alphabetical nomination was assigned service number CF-100,001. The coincidence of having two identical last names in sequence was unusual, particularly since at the time there were only four other Regular Army officers named Smart.

In October 1967, the Army announced its program for conversion to the Social Security Account Number (SSAN) for Personnel Identification. In May 1969, it was announced that the Army would discontinue the issuance of the Military Service Number after 30 June 1969, and that personnel in the active, retired, and Reserve components of the Army would from 1 July 1969, have the SSAN in their records. Department of the Army forms, records, and documents would be redesigned and issued to accommodate this conversion as existing stock levels were depleted. Implementation might be started earlier, although 1 July 1969 was the official date for the conversion. The change was meant "to eliminate the identification of a man by two numbers, since all of our citizens who have reached the age for military service usually have Social Security numbers," explained a Department of Defense spokesman. SSN's appeared for the first time in Army Register Volumes I and II for the year 1970, listing names of commissioned and warrant officers on active duty as of 31 December 1969. The US Air Force adopted the change concurrently and the US Navy and US Marine Corps planned to implement the change in 1972.

At this writing, August 1971, the use of the Social Security Account Number (SSAN) in place of the Serial/Service Number is in general practice in the Army of the United States. The SSAN is the chief personal identification for military personnel, appearing in all records of enlisted men and women and all officers, male and female, and appearing on the Identification Tag worn while in field service or training, during air travel, and overseas, in case of injury or death.

Current Army Regulations governing the above information are:

AR 600-2, 5 June 1969, Personnel, General: Name and Birth Data, Social Security Account Number, and Temporary Identification Number.

AR 608-14, 17 October 1963, Personal Affairs: Social Security.

Dear Sgt. Spink:

Thank you so much for your prompt reply, which I found very interesting. However, I am looking for something a bit more detailed on the WWII officer serial numbers.

Is there anything available?

I note in my work that the 100,000s appear to be those with ROTC or other Reserve commissions, probably during the late 30s.

The 200,000s and 300,000s are fairly common, but I haven't really defined,=but the combat pilots who completed flight training in 1940 and 41 usually were in the 400,000s.

The later combat personnel, early having 600,000s and later 700,000s and some 800,000s. Those commissioned overseas had numbers in the 2000,000s.

Can you find any such breakdown delineated in anyway?

I look forward to your replay.

Thank you much for the work you have already done.

Sincerely yours,
