He Quits After Wisconsin Trouncing; Convinced He Can't Win Nomination

WASHINGTON, Apr. 7-Wendell Willkie's withdrawal from the Republican presidential race after his disappointing showing in Tuesday's Wisconsin primary-where he failed to win a single one of the 24 delegates-gave Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York "the inside track" for the nomination, in the view of many political observers today.

One of the first results was an appreciable rise in the stock of Lt. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota, who ran second to Dewey, capturing four delegates to Dewey's 14 and Gen. Douglas MacArthur's three.

"This certainly puts Stassen among the top three Republican presidential possi-bilities," said Sen. Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.), reflecting the views of many Stassen backers that Wilkie supporters might now go over to the Minnesotan's might how go over to the camp.

Willkie announced his withdrawal dramatically in the midst of an anti-Administration speech at Omaha Wednesday night. Describing the Wisconsin results as "disappointing," he declared: "It is obvious now that I cannot be nominated. I am therefore asking my friends to desist from any activity to that end and not to present my name to the

Rep. Martin Scores Congress' Awarding Of Medal to Nimitz

WASHINGTON, Apr. 7-Commenting on Congress' award of the Distinguished Service Medal to Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, Rep. Thomas E. Martin (R., Iowa) declared that decoration and medals were being handed out at such an "indis-criminate" rate that they may lose their value in public esteem.

The value of medals for heroism, Martin said, would decrease in propor-tion to the number awarded as clashes with the enemy increased.

Martin termed Congress' action awarding the DSM to Nimitz a "very dangerous precedent." Although he granted that Nimitz deserved the medal, Martin said that the military services were better quali-fied than Congress to "determine the merits of each case."

Hollandia Left a Burning Shambles by New Raid; Truk Is Hit Again

Fifth Air Force airmen completed Thursday the crippling of Japan's air and supply base at Hollandia, on the north coast of Dutch New Guinea, when 320 tons of bombs were dropped and 250,000 rounds of ammunition loosed on the town and waterfront, still burning from Wed-nesday's 250-plane raid by Liberators, Mitchells and Bostons.

Clouds of black smoke, with flames 500 feet high, were left over the target area. Direct hits were scored on small vessels moored in the harbor. No air opposition was a countered and only weak ack-ack

Thus the Japanese air force has been bombed off New Guinea for all practical purposes. Hollandia is a shambles, grave-yard of 300 enemy planes, including all that were withdrawn from Wewak while that base was absorbing 4,000 tons of bombs in recent weeks, according to dispatches from the Southwest Pacific. Meanwhile, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz and Gen. Douglas MacArthur continued to hammer away at Truk with another two-way attack on that Jap fortress in the Carolines. Following the 13th assault—by Nimitz's Liberators last Monday night MacArthur's Solomons-based air fleet bombed Dublon, the badly-battered isle which guards an anchorage.

Zagreb Fighter Field Big Battle for Port Guarding Balkans Also Blasted

Anglo-American bombers, striking two more heavy blows at strategic Balkans targets in their campaign to hamstring German forces battling to stem the Russian onslaught, have showered bombs onto the great Ploesti oilfields in Rumania for the second time.

Within the last 48 hours, fires which sent smoke curling 16,000 feet into the air were kindled by American bombers roaring in for the first time over Ploesti since their historic low-level attack last August, and a strategic Luftwaffe air-field at Zagreb, Jugoslavia, was blasted. More than 56 German planes were shot down in these latest aerial thrusts designed to batter enemy supply and communica-tions in support of the Red Army's advance into the Balkans.

Direct Hits on Refineries

In the Ploesti raid Wednesday, direct hits were scored on oil-storage areas, a munitions dump, oil refineries and rail yards. Long-range Lightnings and Thunderbolts escorted the Liberators to within a few miles of the area from which Hitler is said to be obtaining a third of the oil necessary to run the Wehrmacht. Fleets of German fighters and a heavy barrage of anti-aircraft fire met the attackers. Violent aerial battles were fought out less than 30 minutes' flying time from Soviet spearheads approaching Jassy, in northern Rumania.

Twelve out of a force of an estimated 300 U.S. Italy-based bombers were lost in the Ploesti attack, while escorting fighters and bomber gunners shot down at least 40 German aircraft. U.S. fighter losses were not announced.

In the Zagreb attack Thursday, more than 120 German planes vigorously defended the Jugoslav airfield, a main obstacle in their deep Balkan penetrations.

Sixteen German planes were shot down over northern Jugoslavia, near Zagreb, and three heavy bombers were lost.

Discussing the Allied Balkan air offensive at his headquarters in Italy, Air Marshal John C. Slessor, deputy commander of the MAAF, declared yesterday that the Ploesti target was one of the most important the Germans had in the Balkans and if the oilfields "can be knocked" important the Germans had in the Bal-kans and if the oilfields "can be knocked out and kept knocked out, the effect on the outcome of the war can be very great."

The British airman said that the Bucharest rail yards which were attacked Tuesday by U.S. bombers had offered the best bomber target in the world."

On Black Sea Is Expected

Special German units, under orders to "halt the Red Army at any cost," were rushed forward to defend Odessa yesterday as three columns of Soviet cavalry and light tanks advanced within nine miles of the Black Sea port.

The eleventh-hour decision to battle to hold Odessa coincided with a new Nazi effort to relive the encircled garrison at Tarnopol, 65 miles southeast garrison at Tarnopol, 65 miles southeast of the German base at Lwow, in Poland. Big forces of Germans were reported tied up in "violent fighting" in the Odessa area, where the Russians held a belt of land east, northeast and northwest of the city. A correspondent of the Russian Army newspaper Red Star said the enemy reinforcements launched counter-attacks from "favorable positions" but that Cossack cavalry beat them off with heavy losses to the Germans. Planes of the Russians' Black Sea fleet air arm kept constant day and night patrol over the entire coastal area to prevent

Bitter Fighting at Tarnopol

Even heavier fighting was in progress outside Tarnopol, where strong enemy tank and infantry forces were thrown into the attack in an effort to break through to the surrounded garrison, now holding-less than half the town. Russian reports said the drive, from Russian reports said the drive, from southwest of Tarnopol, was repulsed with heavy losses to the Germans, but acknowledged that the fighting was fierce.

The Germans appeared to be attempting to rescue both the Tarnopol garrison and the remnants of the 15 Nazi divisions encircled just to the southeast in the Skala sector.

Two major counter-attacks were reported. Big tank groups were employed in both, but a Red Star reporter said neither gained any appreciable objective.

Moscow dispatches told of heavy Nazi losses in the Skala pocket. When the enemy tried to break out of the area, these reports said, they were cut down by the massed fire of hundreds of Russian guns slowly compressing the trap.

German prisoners taken in the past 24 hours were quoted as having said their high officers had been evacuated from the area by plane. Fighting appeared to have died down on the ssarabian front leading into Rumania. Correspondents in Moscow said no reports of new advances in this area had been received in the last 24 hours. They suggested that forward units had slowed down to permit supply to catch up.

5 Tech Sergeants Flying P51s Are Only EM Pilots in ETO

By James Q. House

Stars and Stripes Unit Correspondent NINTH AIR FORCE FIGHTER COMMAND HQ, Apr. 7-Five tech sergeants who now are full-fledged Mustang pilots with Ninth Air Force Fighter Command are believed to be the only AAF enlisted men flying as combat pilots in the ETO.

They are T/Sgt. John Ferguson, of Bayside, N.Y.; T/Sgt. Dennis L. Johns, of Jackson, Mich.; T/Sgt. Daniel L. Richards, of Long Beach, Cal; T/Sgt. Clifford W. Hare, of Frankfort, Mich., and T/Sgt. Walter H. Yochim, of Pittsburgh

The men were formerly RCAF pilots, having signed up before Pearl Harbor. At that time the youngest of the five was 18, the oldest 21.

They received their wings after training with the Canadians, and some later flew with the RAF on detached service. Four transferred to the USAAF last December, the fifth last month.

Several attempts have been made to get direct commissions for them, but so far each attempt has become engulfed in official red tape. They entered the USAAF with permanent ratings as tech sergeants, equivalent rank to RCAF flight sergeants, the rank they previously held.

"It would be nice to have a commission," one said, "but all of us want to fly more than anything else, and we're getting what we want."

Meanwhile, the sergeants "sweat out" chow lines and otherwise conduct themselves on a 100 per cent GI basis, except when flying their Mustangs.

Easter Eve

The Saturday preceding Easter Sunday is called Holy Saturday here in the British Isles, and the evening, Easter Eve. On this day customs are observed which, with a few exceptions, are of a ritualistic nature; but in past years there were observed others of popular interest, some of which the Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church still retain.

In olden times the morning fires and lights in all churches were extinguished, all ashes and embers were removed, and fresh fires were prepared, lighted, and consecrated. From these fires parishioners obtained tapers or pieces of wood for use in their homes, for it was believed that when such taper or wood was relighted it would serve as a protection against disasters by storms. The water in the font was also replaced by fresh water which was consecrated and then used in baptism, and parishioners took to their homes some of this water, believing that it possessed valuable curative and protective qualities.

Another custom common in England

Another custom common in England in days gone by was that of pace-egging. Companies of boys and men toured the towns and villages performing simple plays in order to obtain money and eggs. Performances by the pace-eggers were frequent until the year 1860, when they began to decline; but the custom still survives in Furness, the Lake District and around Blackburn.

In Devonshire, young people have a

In Devonshire, young people have a custom that is unique. New gloves are generally sent on Easter Eve by the boy friend to his sweetheart. Intimation that a young man's present would be accepted on Easter Eve is generally given by the girl sometime before or on St. Valentine's Day.

And in pre-war England, as at home, eggs were colored on Easter Eve, ready for use on Easter morning,

But one custom, common in England during the sixteeenth and seventeenth centuries, is now almost completely forgotten. That was the custom of bringing home the Easter tree, which was brought out of the woods in a ceremonial manner into the king's house and into the house of every man of honor or worship.

And so was Easter Eve observed in Great Britain. Time and the customs have changed; but the significance of Easter remains. That significance is the promise of life everlasting.

Simple Worship

A British reporter assigned to cover air force activities visited an American base to find out what our crewmen do to counteract the strain of combat. He reported to a group whose bombers have been on the most dangerous missions of this war and one of the answers he received contains a message for all servicemen—a message of particular interest during this season of religious emphasis.

'Newsboys' Air Force' Delivers to Germany

OFFICE AND ADDRESS.

Examining the papers which the "Newsboys' Air Force" delivers to German door-steps are crew members of the Fortress We the People. Originally called Snafu when it was on bombing missions, it did just that until its name was changed. Its record today is 35 bombing hauls, 15 news runs.

By Bud Hutton

A FORTRESS BASE, Apr. 7-Pilots of "The Newsboys' Air Force" today taxied their Fortresses out from under the anonymity which has hidden them for months and told the story of the newspaper bombs they've been dumping on the occupied countries and the Reich.

With the strict rappings of censorship and secrecy removed from their work, the leaflet-bombing airmen showed log books full of their own peculiar brand of operational stories and combat freaks. They told the stories in a slang as indigenous to their particular jobs as other slang is to the bomber crews who haul high explosives to the Reich.

As a matter of fact, they are just about like any other bombing outfit, except for the cargo in their bomb bays—tissuethin miniature newspapers and leaflets telling in straightforward fashion what is happening in the world at war so that the people of the occupied lands, and the Germans themselves, may be exposed to the truth.

These B17 men began calling themselves "The Newsboys' Air Force" (Biggest circulation in the world.—Advt.) shortly after they delivered the first copies of L'Amerique en Guerre (America at War) to France last year.

Hauls which would have been "milk runs" to regular bomber outfits became "paper runs" to these crews, and the bombardiers became "pressmen." Some crews go so far as to call their pilots "the editor."

Line records showed why the air and ground crews alike have been unhappy as story after story was printed about bombers with exceptional operational records. Anonymously, some planes hauling the hitherto secret pamphlets have been the hitherto secret pamphlets have been piling up records such as the 74 missions of the Fort Target for Tonight, of the leaflet squadron commanded by Maj. Earl J. Aber Jr., of Racine, Wis. Target for Tonight did 41 normal bombing missions—a good record in anybody's log—and then was converted to leaflet bombing. It's done 33 such jobs and is still ticking over.

The story of a Fort's name the "paper boys" like to tell best, however, is that of the B17 We the People.

ETO old-timers will remember We the other planes were off and gone, No. 4 started fine.

Things went about like that for half a dozen hauls. Either Snafu wouldn't get a dozen hauls. Either Snafu wouldn't get off the ground or if it did it was such a headache to the pilot that life wasn't worth while. Finally the crew decided to change its name. They settled on the first three words of the preamble to the Constitution... We the people.

Since that day there hasn't been a murmur out of the B17 which used to be named Snafu, and it has a record of

be named Snafu, and it has a record of 35 bombing missions, 15 hauls with newspapers and leaflets.

There have been so many of "The Newsboys' Air Force" planes to make outstanding operational records that Lt. Gen. James Doolittle officially has commended Capt. Harry W. Chandler, of Detroit, this outfit's man to keep 'em

Just as outfits which haul high explosives, the "newsboys" have turned up their own brand of inventive genius, including S/Sgt. Emile Lenseigne, of Moxie City, Wash., who has perfected a tail-gun ring sight made of plexiglass, with the rings cut into the glass and indirectly illuminated through a rheostat control. Lenseigne who is in armament.

The combat crews find their job is a tedious one, but they wouldn't swap with anyone, because "it's different," as 1/Lt. A. E. Weil, operations officer from Tottenville, Staten Island, N.Y., describes it.

Since the first haul last year, they've put in 76 more, an average of some 13.

Targets have been largely in the occupied countries, but they've gone to Frankfurt, Bremen, Hanover and other towns in the Reich, and in the first big daylight job on Berlin leaflets and newsdaylight job on Berlin leaflets and news-papers went down with the bombs, which might have been some comfort to the Germans but small solace to the Nazi leaders who devoted a major share of their propaganda efforts to the next two weeks to combating the insidious, dis-turbing influence of the straightforward news stories in Sternenbanner—The Stars news stories in Sternenbanner—The Stars and Stripes—which the OWI prints exclusively for Germany.

There is no deliberate co-ordination, in most cases, of leaflets and high explosive. The leaflets go where the OWI people think they are needed when they are needed.

"The Newspaper Boys' Air Force" knows what's in its "biggest circulation in the world" (Advt.) The OWI people also send down a literal translation and almost everyone in the crew reads every

T/Sgt. Albert Haymon, of Stamford, Conn., another Ole Bill man and at one time "the most decorated gunner in the ETO," has been commissioned now and, after 21 bombing hauls, about half as many leaflet hauls, and going through the experimental phase of "newspaper bombing," is training new bomber crews to fly to Europe with half a million news-papers each time instead of 6,000 pounds or so of TNT.

As a matter of fact, Haymon and all the rest are pretty well sold out on the idea by now that the bomb load they carry is maybe even more explosive than the ones that are fused and finned.

By substituting a stamp, made of chamois and blocks of wood, for the stencil method, Gove's Ordnance outfit stationed in the ETO was able to fill rush orders much faster. The marking was done by simply dipping the stamp in paint and striking the end of the boxes. The method also resulted in a cleaner job.

A Ninth Air Force fighter base—the identity of which shall be otherwise undisclosed for charitable reasons—has a new flag. They needed it.

The group took over from the RAF. There were speeches from both outfits, a small ceremony, the British flag came down and the Stars and Stripes went up. A couple of days later an RAF squadron leader stepped in the colonel's office and said "Aren't there 48 stars in the U.S. flag?" He pointed to the flagpole.

Somehow, from somewhere, someone had rung a 32-star flag into the dedicatory exercises.

Piloting his B24 into the target, Schneider flew a steady course with one hand and shook his other fist at the air base below until his crew reported direct hits followed by smoke and flames: then Schneider by smoke and flames; then Schneider nearly wept with joy. The base was one from which the German counter-patrol craft flew that knocked down Schneider's plane when he was on anti-sub warfare with Coastal Command.

The German battleship Tirpitz has been neutralized possibly for the duration of the war, experts said yesterday after an examination of photos taken in the surprise attack Monday by the largest carrier-borne force ever concentrated against a single ship.

At least 24 hits—four by armorpiercing bombs and 20 by medium bombs—were scored on the 35,000-ton battlewagon as it apparently was about to leave its anchorage in Alten Fiord, North Norway

Not one German plane rose to defend the Tirpitz in the attack by two forces of dive-bombing Barracudas based on aircraft carriers of the British Home Fleet.

The Tirpitz, its guns silenced by the blow, was left adrift and possibly grounded by the stern as a 3,000-foot column of smoke poured from its battered insides, torn by heavy explosions. A roaring blaze was observed in two places amidships and small fires elsewhere.

In the first of two attacks the Admiralty announced, the Tirpitz was hit near the bridge, amidships and forward. More than an hour later the second wave of Barracudas pierced a smoke screen to achieve more hits.

Three Barracudas and one of the escorting Scafires, Corsairs, Hellcats and Wildcats were lost.

Naval experts said yesterday that although the Tirpitz might be able to make its way southward some time in the interest of the control of future it would be useless as a warship for months and perhaps for the re-mainder of the war.
